FROM CHICAGO.

GEN. CLARKE GETS THERE WITH HIS BIG SOMBRERO.

White City Bandits Still Raliding Helpless Visitors.

Chicago, May 15.—The World's Fair visitors who are in the city at the present time will all be stranded if they stay here much longer, only a millionaire can stand the awful strain on his exchequer. The necessities of life are fast becoming luxuries, and it is a pity that something has not been done to prevent this wholesale robbery of people. I am told that an effort is being made to have the Board of Aldermen pass an ordinance prohibiting all classes of business men charging more than a nominal rate. The present exorbitant charges can't fail but have a bad effect on the Fair in general, as it will keep away two classes of people—those who can't afford to be robbed and those who won't be robbed. But I am of the opinion that after a while rates will come down to the standard basis, and that is why I would advise those who contemplate taking in the Fair, to wait a few months.

I took a trip a few miles out into the country a day or two ago, and while there asked a friend if he was going to the Fair. His answer was: "No; I have decided on a trip around the world; it's cheaper."

I am surprised that the silver men of the country haven't large quantities of free coinage literature here for distribution among the visitors. Don't you know that the Fair is the greatest advertising bureau anybody ever saw? While the silver question is being considerably discussed, still there should be some facts and figures handy for reference, and it isn't too late to see that this is attended to.

And speaking of advertising, now would be just the time to advertise Nevada and her resources, and I wonder that your last legislature didn't make some provision for it. There should be several thousand copies of the Surveyor General's report here, which could be distributed and placed where they would do the most good. I find lots of advertising matter here gotten out by booming real estate agents, who desire to dispose of land at fabulous prices, but such things cannot inspire as much confidence as an official report of a State officer.

I met General Clarke last evening and while in conversation with him some street gamin whistled "Where did you get that hat?"

Though the General seemed a little discomfited, I couldn't help smiling. R. M. said he had been greatly annoyed in this way, but would continue to wear the hat, even if it spoiled the Fair.

Some genius has placed a nickel-in-the-slot machine in a conspicuous place, labeled, "Drop a nickel in the slot and see it disappear."

He reaps quite a harvest every day. A crowd of urchins haunt the machine to guy the suckers who get caught. An old man dropped in his nickel the other day and the kids set up a howl. One asked: "Did yer see it, Mister?"

"No, my boy, I saw nothing."

"Well, try 'er again then, and look sharp."

In went another nickel.

"Did ye see 'er that time?"

"See what?"

"See the nickel disappear, ye blooming old guy. Say, you're dead slow, see?"

Last evening accompanied by a young lady friend, I neared the silver statue of Justice. I went into raptures over it, as all men do, but I noticed that the young lady did not seem to hardly notice it. I asked the reason for this and she answered me.

"What do I care for the statue of a woman, however beautiful and shapely? I am a woman myself, and from a physical standpoint my sex can have no charms for me. What if this thing is modeled after Ada Rehan, who has the honor of being the best proportioned woman before the public? I can admire it only as a work of art. Show me a statue of Apollo, the perfect man, modeled after the form of some one of our great athletes and men of muscle. I think the sentiments which combine to make up the noble, lovable, and I might say, desirable woman, are at a pretty low ebb in one of my sex who can go into ecstasies over a statue which might have been modeled after herself. I always did admire man."

I modestly bowed in acknowledgment of the compliment to my sex.

As I expected it would be, the Fair will now be open every day in the week. The Directors tried the experiment of Sunday closing, and it was a rank failure in every respect.

I find that Chicago people dress mostly in dark goods, for the reason that the smoke and coal dust speedily ruin any light fabrics, as it can neither be brushed nor washed out, and it is more than likely that at the close of the Fair, the Great White City will have assumed a dingy appearance.

The freaks and nuisances which always go with an affair of this kind are out in force. The woman with the crying children, and the woman who is continually losing her's, are among the chief misery makers. These two epidemics don't get much consolation from the police.

One woman rushed up to a blue-coat, and excitedly told him that her child had been lost or stolen. He remarked:

"Well madam, if it's the same one you had here this morning, you have my hearty congratulations. But I really don't think anyone would steal that young one."

With an emphatic "wretch" she hurried away and tackled another "cop." He gave it to her a good deal harder than the other one. He said:

"Your child, madam, was run over by the cars a few moments ago, and the passengers made up a purse for the conductor." But she had espied the youngster in a crowd, and the remark was lost on the happy mother.

Purcell—Dunn.

The welter-weight fight to come off in Reno on the 27th, with Frank Purcell of Salt Lake and Mick Dunn of Australia as the principals, ought to be one of the hottest ever fought in the State. Dunn is just out from the old country and wants to make a record in America. He is now training in Reno.

Purcell, pretty generally known on the Pacific Coast as the hardest left handed short arm hitter in his class, is training at Shaw's Hot Springs to win, and says he'll make Dunn hit the boards or quit the business. The writer visited him in his training quarters Sunday and witnessed his terrific bag punching.

A special train will be run from Carson on the night of the fight and tickets will soon be on sale.

Jim Millen and Will Beals both of Carson have booked themselves to fight a finish fight as a sort of preliminary in order to sprinkle a little claret on the ground floor and get the crowd in good condition for the big fight. Millen is also training at the Springs and Beals is training himself on a new method in his room.

Full of Silver.

Ex-Representative Bartine of Nevada, one of the leaders of the free coinage movement in the last Congress, is still in Washington. While lingering here to close up his Congressional business, in view of the fact that his career in the House is over, he occasionally drops into one of the local theaters to see the show. Last week he went to see Herrmann, at the National Theater. When the famous "black artist" proceeded to perform one of his wonderful tricks of picking up silver dollars from the atmosphere, men's ears, eyes and nose, he accidentally selected Mr. Bartine as one of his unwilling subjects to operate upon. Amid shouts and laughter from the audience Herrmann apparently combed a number of silver dollars from Mr. Bartine's whiskers. The Nevada Statesman was so much surprised that he unconsciously ran his fingers through his beard to ascertain if there were any stray dollars remaining.—Washington Post.

An Astonishing Cure.

People who are disposed to laugh at the Keely cure should look at the case of "Handsome Harry" of Hawthorne. He has been on the verge of tremens for years and was taken to the Reno Bi-Chloride Institute raising. He was in a few weeks discharged cured. It has made a new man of him and he hasn't touched a drop since. A few months ago he was merely a sot in the gutter, now he is to all appearances another man altogether.
